W. A. DOUGLASS, Secretary.

During the year the Presbyterian Hospital has sustained a great loss in the death of Dr. Nicholas Senn, one of the attending surgeons.

Dr. Nicholas Senn was appointed surgeon of the Presbyterian Hospital in 1891 and was on active duty until his death. Dr. Senn was one of the great surgeons of the world, a man of international reputation and a man who was very generally regarded as the leader of American surgery.

Dr. Senn was a great teacher of surgery and conducted in connection with the Presbyterian Hospital and Rush Medical College one of the most widely known and popular surgical clinics in America. While surgeon at the Hospital he added a number of important discoveries to existing surgical knowledge.

For years when he was in the full enjoyment of health and active work, he devoted an enormous amount of time to his patients at the Hospital. He came punctually at about half past one in the afternoon every day with the exception of Sundays and worked on frequently until 6 or 7 o'clock in the evening.

His services were of inestimable value to the institution and to his patients; thousands of whom, rich and poor alike, will long cherish the memory of Master-Surgeon Nicholas Senn.

REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

of The

PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL

To the Members of the Society, the churches affiliated with it, and the public:

The past year has been one of steady encouraging work and progress. The effort for improvement in all branches of the service has been maintained. During a portion of the year our old building, known as the Ross-Hamill building, was closed, and two others in which was our Maternity service, have been torn down to make room for the erection of the Private Pavilion. This curtailed our facilities and reduced the number of beds. But we have been fortunate in being able to carry on our work with less hindrance and demoralization than usually occurs in the erection of new buildings as an addition to a hospital plant. Most of the year all of our beds have been filled and the demand on us has been all that we could care for.

The Private Pavilion, begun in June, has not progressed as rapidly as expected, owing to unforeseen complications in construction and the ordinary unavoidable delays. It is now well advanced and should be ready for occupancy not later than August. When completed it will be a great addition to our facilities for private patients. It contains fifty-eight rooms, single and en suite, which will be entirely disconnected from the main hospital, and will afford quiet, seclusion and comfort to pay patients equal to any in the country. The building is absolutely fireproof and conforms in every respect to the most modern requirements for a hospital building. Artificial ventilation ensures a full supply of pure air moderated to the proper temperature. All the water used in the building will be filtered in the most approved manner and sterilized. The drinking water will all be cooled in the pipes. The refrigerator boxes will be cooled from a central ice plant. The use of a vacuum cleaning system will diminish the trouble from dirt and dust. A complete hydro-therapeutic plant is provided. There will be two operating rooms in the building to be used only for private patients. These rooms have received the special care of our surgical staff, all details of light, ventilation and scientific methods have had most careful attention, and it is confidently believed that they have no superiors. Very liberal provision has been made for the comfort of special nurses who may be in attendance on patients, thus ensuring their best service. A large diet kitchen is provided, with class room for the pupil nurses, in their course of dietetics, and in this kitchen all special diets and all delicacies will be prepared. On the roof will be a sun parlor with small serving room and kitchen, and a large open space where patients can receive all the benefits of fresh air treatment, which is now showing such beneficial results. A new and enlarged pharmacy will give a much needed improvement to our present facilities.

This private pavilion will be open to the use of any reputable physician, and is not intended to be limited to our own staff. If this pavilion is as fully occupied as is expected and hoped for, the increase of income will be considerable and will enable us to increase our charity work.

A new power house is under way, which will contain boilers, etc., and all machinery for the completed plant which is hoped for at no distant day. In this building will be the laundry, which will contain the most modern machinery, so arranged as to ensure economical administration. This of itself will be a most valuable addition to our present facilities. Connection with our present buildings will be by a tunnel, ensuring access in all weathers. It is expected that this power plant will be completed in July.

During the year the only lot in our block not heretofore owned by us, except the property of Rush Medical College, has been purchased and paid for, and we now own more than three-fourths of the entire block. When our present plans are completed we shall have a compact, well-balanced plant with every facility for the best service and most economical administration. The buildings now under construction will be completed, furnished and equipped at a cost well below the original estimates, which were $300,000 for the pavilion and $160,000 for the so-called power house, machinery and tunnels. The erection of these buildings will exhaust our Building Fund and leave a deficit of about $60,000. But it was considered by the Board of Managers not only wise, but necessary, to go forward with the work, and we have done so, in the confident belief that the results will fully justify the expenditure and that we shall be furnished with the necessary means by our friends who will approve of our course.

This hospital stands for the best methods and the highest standard of service. It has never been satisfied with an inferior position. Its strong staff and connection with Rush Medical College make it a great factor as an educational institution and for the advancement of scientific knowledge. The high standard of medical and surgical practice, and of nursing in the hospital, must be maintained and constantly improved. There is no such thing as halting. To stop is to go backward. In this belief we are going forward, and we expect support. Our plan contemplates replacing the Ross-Hamill with a modern fireproof building, with additional administration facilities, a complete maternity service, in which we are now somewhat deficient; an improved laboratory and the ordinary wards. The Jones building should be slightly changed to give a large number of small wards containing three or four beds. The building is well adapted for such change and such wards are in good demand. We would then have about 275 beds, in entirely fireproof buildings, well arranged for the best results, with most economical administration. Such an increase of beds will require more nurses, and this means additional accommodations for our school. To make these changes and leave the hospital free of debt will require not less than $250,000.

To the Presbyterians of this city and vicinity, and to the generous public always ready to give a favorable response to any public work well conceived and properly carried on, we submit the case. Shall we go forward and develop in this hospital the power for good which lies within it, or shall we be satisfied to restrict and curtail its usefulness and fall short of the opportunity which is offered to us?

Most grateful thanks are given to those kind friends who by their generous donations have enabled the Board to complete the work of the Hospital for the year without any debt and with a small balance to its credit. Also to Messrs. Arthur Young & Co., who have again made a complete auditing of all accounts without charge.

The constant devotion of the Medical Staff to all the interests of the Hospital and its liberal assistance so freely given at all times for the improvement of the service merits and has our sincere appreciation.

To our internes and nurses we owe appreciation for high ideals of duty, well performed.

Thanks are given to all the employees of the Hospital, not only for faithful discharge of duties, but for their hearty co-operation in all efforts that have been made to improve and maintain the service.

ALBERT M. DAY, President.

CHICAGO, April 1st, 1908.

To the Board of Managers of the Presbyterian Hospital:

Since the opening of the Hospital in 1883 there have been 48,027 patients admitted, an average of 1,921 a year for the 25 years. Three thousand two hundred and twenty were admitted last year, this being a small decrease from the previous one, owing to the tearing down of the maternity building to make way for our new pavilion, and the closing of the Ross-Hamill building to patients for two months. In spite of the decrease in the number of beds we cared for all the emergency patients, special care being taken of the poor, for the financial depression caused more sickness and suffering throughout the city than in years when conditions were normal.

The reports of the various departments show the work done for the year.

THE FIFTH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE
School for Nurses
OF
THE PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL

Mr. President, Members of the Board of Managers:

Organization of the School having become an accomplished fact, the fifth year of its existence has been somewhat uneventful, while in the nursing of the institution and the instruction given our pupils the policy of former years has been continued with few changes.

During the summer of 1907, on account of the closing of the children's wards and of the maternity, training had to be secured elsewhere in these branches. The Chicago Lying-In Hospital very courteously received several members of our senior class, while the Baby Sanitarium at Jackson Park supplied to us material for training in the care of sick children, and at the same time was itself assisted by the services our nurses were able to give. Arrangements have also been made by which nurses wishing experience in the care of the insane may obtain this at the Elgin Insane Asylum. Seven of the more advanced pupils have already taken advantage of this opportunity and have spent three months or longer in that institution.

Although the general health of the pupils has been good, we have, naturally, shared in the common ailments of the winter months. During the recent scarlet fever epidemic three of the nurses contracted the disease, one of them, Miss Mary Byrne, a promising member of the junior class, in such malignant form that she lived only four days after her entrance into the hospital. This is the first death which has occurred in the school.

We wish to express our continued appreciation and thanks to Dr. Herrick and to Dr. Irons, the physicians to the school, for their ready response to our many demands upon their time, as also to the other members of the staff for their kind assistance.

Although still receiving many requests from graduate nurses for post-graduate work, for a number of months we have been unable to grant such requests; our inability to do so being due to the crowded condition of the Home. As the anticipated future enlarged work of the hospital will necessitate a still greater increase in the number of nurses, it is desirable that provision should be made for more bed room accommodation in the Home and also for additional kitchen and dining room space.

There are at present in the school, including the preliminary department, ninety-nine pupils, making, with the seventeen graduates in positions of responsibility, a total of one hundred and sixteen to care for in the Home. The average number of nurses on daily general duty in the hospital during the year has been ninety-three.

Eighty formal applications have been received from young women wishing to enter the school, forty-five of these being accepted for the probationary term.

As usual, many calls have been made upon us to provide nurses for cases of sickness outside the institution. We have been able to respond to one hundred and forty-four of these.

Six hundred and three days of special nursing has been accomplished in the hospital by pupils of the school, and fifty-four hundred by graduate nurses.

Some additions have been made to the school library, the number of books reaching three hundred and thirty, of which one hundred and sixty-two are reference and text books on nursing and medical subjects.

Several donations have been received during the year, for which we wish to return thanks. Thanks are also due and are gratefully returned to all who have assisted us in class or other instruction for our pupils; to the members of the Ladies' Aid Society and of the Board of Managers of the institution.

Respectfully submitted,

M. H. McMILLAN,

Superintendent of Nurses and Principal of the School.

REPORT OF LIBRARY COMMITTEE.

This Committee has held eleven (11) meetings during the past year. All bookcases have been refilled each month—the one in the Reception Room occasionally. We have covered 1,367 books.

Each month friends have remembered us with magazines, and many good books have found a place on our book shelves, but there is room for more.

We would thank the Ladies' Aid for their annual gift of fifteen dollars, also the many friends who have enabled us during the year to bring a little cheer and gladness to many of the patients through our Library.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. FRED B. CARTER,

Chairman.

REPORT OF THE VISITING AND DEVOTIONAL COMMITTEE.

The work of the Visiting Committee during the year has varied but little from that of the previous years.

There have been held three meetings, which were well attended.

Members report seventeen hundred calls, which have been received with kindness and grateful appreciation by patients visited.

With but two exceptions every Monday has found from one to six of the Visiting Committee in our institution, at which time flowers and papers have been distributed. The flowers were mostly the donations of Bassett & Washburn, of Hinsdale; and Schiller, of Chicago. The papers were furnished by some of the Sabbath Schools.

Through Mr. Talbot's most generous donation and the kindness of other friends, the whole hospital building was most beautifully decorated at Christmas time.

One of our members gave us five dollars, which has been a very great help. We are always most grateful for any assistance in this great work for the Dear Master.

The work is its own reward, for the felt blessing goes hand in hand with the efforts made; but the need is great and we would urge each member to devote a little more time to the work during the coming months—as the present force of regular visitors cannot begin to cover the ground.

Respectfully submitted,

WILOMENE T. WHITE,
Chairman.

REPORT OF THE ASSOCIATE MEMBERSHIP COMMITTEE FOR THE YEAR ENDING APRIL 1, 1908

Number of members, 703. Total amount received, $1,091.75 = 77.75. 32 churches have been communicated with, from 4 of which no response was received. 11 churches have made an advance over last year in the sum donated, 14 have decreased their contributions, while 3 gave the same amount. The largest individual gift, $100, ever given through this fund comes from the First Church of Evanston. The decline in gifts for this fund from many of our churches may be traced to the financial condition of the country. It is, however, the duty of all the women in the various churches in this Presbytery to take up the responsibility of this work done especially by the Woman's Board of the Hospital. All feel they cannot be active members in this effort and it is for them that this Associate Membership Fund is established, and in the future let every Presbyterian woman rally to this work which should, in the estimate of our church, be of prime importance.

Universal distribution met by universal co-operation of the Presbyterian women in this Presbytery alone would give this hospital the opportunity for enlarged work among the pathetic sufferers who are directed to its doors.

Respectfully submitted,

AMELIA OWSLEY CRAIG,
Chairman.

Regular religious services for the patients in the Hospital have been held throughout the year at 11 a. m. Sunday morning. There has been an average attendance of forty. The old hymns and consolatory gospel are a large part of the service, which is very brief. Many hearts are strengthened and new purposes formed under the truth the end of which cannot be tabulated. The Chaplain is constantly at the call of any of the patients who request a call or who express desire for his visit or ministry. Special occasions as Christmas, Easter, and the like the service consists of special music as well as the usual order.

REV. MARION G. COLE.

REPORT OF THE SOCIAL COMMITTEE OF THE LADIES AID SOCIETY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL.

This Committee has planned and arranged the work for two general meetings of the Society, one in October and one in February. At these meetings quite a number of garments were made for Hospital use—about thirty nightingales and fourteen orderlies' aprons, besides marking a large number of table napkins, hemming table cloths and infants' napkins and making other small garments for the children's ward. The Committee also tried to live up to its name by making the afternoon a social one; there has also an effort been made at each meeting of the Society to help new members to become acquainted.

We realize that each member of the Ladies' Aid Society should be an active member, not only in name but in active, live interest in the work of the Hospital in raising money for its support and in encouraging those who are bearing the responsibilities of this great work.

Respectfully submitted,

MARY E. CHILDS,
Chairman.

ADDRESS OF THE PRESIDENT

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

We are very grateful to our friends, who by their generous gifts, have made it possible for us to erect these buildings. It is a pleasure to see some of them here, and we hope that as they inspect the buildings, they will feel that as stewards of their bounty, we have administered our trust in a careful and wise manner.

I wish to recall to your memory, the words of the late Rev. Dr. John H. Barrows, in his address at the dedication of the Jones Wing in 1889. "The charity which this institution represents, appeals to the hearts of the tenderest and broadest Christian philanthropy; for the hospital is peculiarly a Christian institution. It may be described as modern Christianity, guided by modern science, endeavoring to re-enact the beneficent ministry of the "Man of Nazareth." This was the spirit that animated the founders of this hospital.

In 1879 the trustees of Rush Medical College considered the question of a hospital in connection with the college, and purchased a site for the building. They also voted to raise $15,000 for the purpose. Several Catholic sisterhoods were extremely anxious to assume its management and raise funds for its erection. But Dr. Joseph P. Ross believed that the Presbyterian churches of Chicago could be induced to form an association which would accept the hospital and put it on the basis of the Presbyterian hospitals of New York and Philadelphia. Through his efforts Mr. Tuthill King donated $10,000 for the building, and this money was placed in trust with the trustees of the college. Work on plans was commenced at once, and construction soon followed. Simultaneously an effort was made to interest the Presbyterian denomination in the hospital work.

A letter was addressed to such gentlemen in the city as were known to be philanthropic, and would be likely to sympathize in its object. Encouraging replies were received and a charter for the hospital secured. The first meeting of the gentlemen was held at the Grand Pacific Hotel on December 13, 1883. All those present agreed as to the urgent necessity of such an institution, and the organization was immediately formed. In furtherance of this object the trustees of the college conveyed by deed to the managers of the Presbyterian Hospital the building already partially erected, and the latter assumed all the responsibilities of completing and administering it.

There were then in the city 1749 hospitals beds, a city of 650,000 people, which as our first report made in 1884 says "was soon to become a million."

Through the Presbyterian Social Union, interest was aroused, and it was agreed that the enterprise should embrace all the churches of the city who acknowledged Presbyterian polity and doctrine, no matter what the minor differences in the church were. Besides the conventional Presbyterian churches, the United Presbyterian, the Welsh, the Reformed Dutch, and others were interested. Several pastors delivered sermons with special reference to the hospital, and the ladies of the several congregations, organized a Ladies' Aid Society and rendered efficient aid in furnishing the building.

It may interest you, if I give you the names of the first officers and managers, men who were prominently identified with the city at that time. President, Daniel

K. Pearsons; vice-president, C. M. Henderson; treasurer, Geo. W. Hale. corresponding secretary, C. H. McCormick, Jr.; recording secretary, W. A. Douglass.

A large proportion of those devoted men have gone to their reward. Mr. Douglass has served as secretary from that date to the present time. A son of Dr. R. C. Hamill has been for many years an active member of the board, and for some years its president. A son of Mr. John B. Drake is also a member of the board.

Plans were made for a modern hospital, to contain 300 beds and the object set forth was to "make it the best private hospital in the city, and under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church." In the first report, its aims were set forth in these words: "It is not intended to make this hospital a merely local charity. It opens its doors to the sick and suffering of the great west. As Chicago is a great commercial center, so we hope to have our hospital regarded as a Bethesda of healing to which all may come and with God's blessing receive health and strength."

With this spirit, the founders of this hospital, with great faith and high purpose; laid its foundation. Of Dr. Robert C. Hamill, Dr. Barrows said: "Few men in our city, if any indeed, have ever left a brighter record of Christian service, or an example of Christian manhood worthier than his." "Another of the founders and early benefactors of the hospital was the late Mr. Tuthill King, but for whose gifts the institution might not have been begun. Another earnest and laborous friend of the hospital, whose name has been given to the oldest part of it, is Dr. Joseph P. Ross. And it would be unjust not to mention the incalculable services which have been rendered by the gifts, the active interest, and the sleepless labor, of him who was for years president of the institution, Dr. D. K. Pearsons."

The first building cost $32,000. It contained forty-five beds and was finished in September, 1884.

The number of days' treatment for the first year was 12,884, of which 841 were free. It is an interesting comparison that the days' treatment for 1908 were 61,096, of which 13,356 were free and 32,839 partly paid.

The second annual report speaks of "the difficulty of avoiding a deficit each month of several hundred dollars, and the need of a larger building," and urges every member of the society to use his personal endeavor to secure funds.

There was a training school the first year with term of service of one year. Eighteen were admitted, of whom only eight proved suitable. At the end of the first year the nursing of the hospital was put in charge of the Illinois Training School. In 1885 the nursing was taken from the Illinois and the hospital training school reorganized, and the report says: "To bring the school to the highest standard, we must have better accommodations for our nurses."

In 1887 a new wing so called was built, named "the Hamill wing," in memory of Dr. R. C. Hamill. This increased the number of beds to eighty-five.

In 1886 Mr. Daniel A. Jones left $10,000 in his will to the hospital and a large amount of money to be disposed of as Mrs. Jones and her daughters deemed best. They decided to give $100,000 for the erection of the main edifice. What is now known as "the Jones building" was the result, a most noble memorial for a noble man. This magnificent gift was further increased by the amount of $65,000 for the endowment fund in 1890.

The Jones building was dedicated April 22, 1889, and from that day the Presbyterian Hospital took its place among the best hospitals of the country. Since 1883 it has cared for over 48,000 patients.

The record of the years shows constant effort for higher service hampered also continually by lack of funds. The receipts for each year were less than the expenses, at times to the amount of five or six thousand dollars, and every year until 1906 there has been a deficit. Each year, the advance in scientific treatment, has materially increased the expense, especially in surgery, which is a very heavy service with us. The standard of nursing has been steadily advancing, and the cost has advanced quite as steadily and perhaps more rapidly.

As at the beginning, the necessity of more money was specially emphasized, so each year the emphasis became more emphatic. And in 1905 the managers decided to endeavor to raise sufficient funds to pay the floating debt, then $65,000, and to erect a pavilion for care of private patients only. The income from this building, it was believed, would be sufficient to assist materially in carrying on the free work, and be in the nature of an addition to our endowment. The amount so raised was $400,000.

A comprehensive plan was made which comprises this pavilion and eventually a power house, and a new building in place of the present Ross-Hamill wing. Carrying out this plan, $25,000 was expended on the Jones' wing, putting it in perfect order. Then this pavilion was commenced, and later the power house, as the immediate necessity for it became evident. The buildings have been erected at a cost of $390,000, including furnishings, a sum $55,000 less than the original estimate. They represent the most modern and substantial fireproof construction. While nothing has been expended for ornament, nothing has been spared for utility. All approved appliances for hospital purposes to date are installed in the buildings. The facilities for economical administration of the plant are the result of patient thought by the different heads of the departments. The building has been carefully planned for the sole purpose of obtaining the best results in the care of the sick, with the most economical efficient administration. And we hope that the results obtained will justify the plans.

The number of beds is now 275, which is as large a hospital as can be administered to advantage.

There will be a debt of about $50,000 which the board must carry. We hope that funds will be furnished us by friends of the institution at an early date to liquidate this indebtedness.

It is a constant pressure for money. For two years we have been able to administer the hospital without a deficit, and we expect the same result this year, although it has been a very hard one. The amount of our free work has been largely increased by the hard times and the necessities of the poor. Sustained effort to increase our donations from the public, in what we call the Centenary Fund, is largely responsible for our improved condition. But as the first report of the hospital emphasized the needs of new buildings, so now the same urgency exists.

A very important part of the work in the hospital is its educational departments. There are fourteen young doctors serving as internes and attached to different members of the staff. Under their watchful care and supervision these young doctors obtain that experience and knowledge which helps to fit them to begin their practice.

There is still a larger number working hard in our laboratory in research work, the value of which is sure to be of great importance and very hard to properly appreciate.

There is a training school in connection with the hospital, which started April 1, 1903, with twenty pupils. It now numbers 121. The connection of the hospital with Rush Medical College is of great advantage to this school. Its professors give lectures on all important subjects connected with the modern, highly developed science of nursing. The length of the course is three years and a half. During the first half year the pupils are on probation and only those whose condition of health seems equal to carrying them through are accepted.

It is the opinion of the medical staff of the hospital that this school has no superior in the country.

One of the important differences in our nursing, and that of most hospitals is, that our nurses have but eight hours' duty a day, instead of twelve hours as is the general custom. By requiring a twelve-hour service, they reduce the cost of nursing materially, and make a better financial statement. But it seems plain to us that they do it at the expense of the nurses, and certainly at the expense of the patients, for no nurse can be at her best, working twelve hours a day for three years. Neither can she have sufficient time to prosecute her studies. Both the nurse and the patients must suffer.

We have now 133 nurses, 121 of whom are at the Home. It has become necessary to put twelve of our head nurses on the fifth floor of this building, which is greatly to be regretted. Even at that the Home is crowded, in some cases five in a room. The number will soon be 150, and that number is needed, and an addition to our Home is imperative. Such an addition will probably cost $100,000.

The school is a success. It is doing good work. Its work is needed, and is of public benefit aside from the hospital. Our graduate nurses are in constant demand for other hospitals, as well as for private duty. Surely any school that aims to graduate only the highest grade of trained nurses, fully equipped, physically and mentally, for their profession, and ready for the best service in public and private duty, deserves support. We hope that this need will commend itself to some generous friend or friends, and that the required funds will be given us.

The Ross-Hamill wing, built when modern construction was not known, should be torn down, and a new building erected in its place. It is greatly needed for laboratory, store rooms and complete kitchens, aside from the demands for better protection to our ward patients.

This would cost $125,000. When these buildings are erected, our plans will be completed, and the plant will be sufficiently large for all time. It will be harmoniously arranged and divided for the proper care of the sick and for economical administration.

This pavilion and the power house mark the completion of one-half of what we have in mind and hope to do.

There is every incentive for persistence in carrying out this plan. Every day shows to who are most intimately engaged in the work, the great need of it, and the blessing it is. We are deeply grateful for all the generosity that has been shown us. But the definition of gratitude as "a lively expectation of favors to come" is quite applicable to our condition of mind. Presbyterian in name, this hospital should appeal deeply to all Presbyterians of this city and vicinity, and they should make it their own. Recognizing as it does, no distinction of sect, race or worldly circumstance, in its administration to the sick and suffering, it has a right to appeal to all the citizens of this great city. Striving as it does to furnish the best facilities for the education of nurses and doctors, it should appeal to all those who desire the highest attainments in those professions, and who realize how much in the lives of all of us depends upon them. We see the need, we know what can be done to make this hospital a much greater blessing to our city, and we earnestly ask the thoughtful consideration of those who are able to help us.

THE PRESIDENT :

The hospital is exceedingly fortunate in having a very strong medical staff, men not only strong in their profession, but strong in their hearts, men who have always been loyal and devoted to this hospital, ever ready to help it in every way in their power, and I am very glad indeed to have the opportunity here, before so many, to testify my sense of obligation to the medical staff. It is an old saying that "time is money," and on that basis the medical staff of this hospital has given far more money than all the contributions that have come to it during the years that they have been connected with it. Any one can come here, the poorest patient, and can receive and does receive the very best and highest skill and treatment, and so it is eminently proper that Dr. Frank Billings should be asked to speak to you, as representing the medical staff of this hospital.

DR. BILLINGS :

Mr. President, Board of Managers, Ladies and Gentlemen—Mr. Day, when he asked me to speak to you today, said he would like to have me talk upon the particular phase of the uses of a hospital. He wanted me to do this, as I am an official of Rush Medical College. As you have heard from Mr. Day's address, Rush Medical College was the source from which sprang this institution. An educational institution gave this hospital birth. This hospital, like others, was founded on the principle of giving aid to the poor sick; but its association with an educational institution has made the Presbyterian Hospital a place of education from its very beginning.

Medicine has made an enormous advance since this hospital was founded in 1884. Indeed, medicine has been revolutionized. Those of us who practiced medicine at that day have had to change almost entirely the facts which were taught to us; not the fundamental facts, but the many methods used in the treatment of disease. Consequently, as the methods of examination of patients and of the management of disease have changed, the institution for the education of physicians has changed. And this institution, an affiliated one for the care of the sick, has necessarily changed.

It would be wrong to make comparisons and say that the methods of medical education and methods of treatment of the sick of that day were poor. They were not poor for that age and day. Indeed, they were the best for that era, but they were deficient and poor as compared with the methods of today.

Consequently, the educational methods in Rush Medical College and the methods of treatment of this hospital have vastly improved and especially is that true of the last decade. I think the majority of people who do not visit and know intimately about hospitals, think of the medical school as an institution which should have no recognition from lay people and should have no connection with a hospital. This they have been led to believe because they have not known just what the relation of a hospital and a medical school is and frequently they have seen articles in the lay press which has still further prejudiced them. I know it is the usual belief that the hospitals connected with medical schools furnished the poor, sick and usually unwilling patient, to the clinic who is exhibited for the edification of medical students. Mr. Day has told you what contented patients he has seen in going through the wards and the rooms, and if you would make a like visit, you would find that the patients, who go to the clinics to illustrate phases of disease, have not only gone willingly, but that they are usually pleased they have been able to go to the clinic. Furthermore, you would find that the pay patients, who are usually not considered clinical, are quite as willing to go and sometimes feel slighted if they are not invited to appear before the clinic.

I have been connected with this hospital since 1898 and I never yet have had one patient refuse to go before the clinic. Many have requested me to take them to the clinic. The impression of people who do not know the facts is absolutely wrong as to the attitude of the patients in the hospital in reference to clinics.

I want to make this statement and make it emphatic: The hospital that is used as a part of an educational institution will rank in its reputation for the care of the sick just in proportion as it is a successful educational institution. Show me a hospital that does not permit teaching of medical students and of nurses in its amphitheater or its wards, and I will show you an institution that is below grade. Not the least benefit is the publicity which this sort of work affords. Publicity is a safeguard against maltreatment, against carelessness upon the part of those who have the care of patients and against cruelty to the patients.

The relation of this hospital to education goes even further than that enumerated above. Rush Medical College has affiliated with it an out-patient department called the Central Free Dispensary, to which come an enormous number of poor people. Last year there were over forty thousand poor patients who were treated at the Central Free Dispensary. These patients are able to go to their homes, but some of them in time become too ill and then the Presbyterian Hospital becomes the recipient. The hospital is, therefore, related to an out-patient department which it does not control, but with which it reciprocates through Rush Medical College and it takes part, therefore, in taking care of an enormous number of poor people without cost to itself.

The Presbyterian Hospital co-operates with Rush Medical College in the education of the medical students and the students of the Presbyterian Hospital Training School for Nurses. To do this well it must carry out the work in a scientific manner. It must maintain laboratories to aid in the examination of patients and for research. It must afford the opportunities for examinations necessary to reach accurate decisions in diagnosis. Usually this may be done fully in the so-called university hospital; that is, the hospital controlled by a university and of which the medical staff is in command. The methods of management of the Presbyterian Hospital have so changed under the present management that it has become in a sense a university hospital from an educational point of view. This affords better advantages for its patients, for the medical staff, for the internes, for the nurses and for the students than ever before, and better indeed than that of almost any other institution in the country.

The Presbyterian Hospital affords opportunities for the education of medical students and Rush Medical College affords opportunities to the Presbyterian Hos-hospital Training School to educate its nurses. That is, the college teaches the nurses the fundamental studies without cost to the hospital. The work here is, therefore, co-ordinated and co-operation exists between the two institutions.

Now, I have enumerated in a brief way the great good which the Presbyterian Hospital affords those immediately connected with it, as its management, its staff, its patients, etc., and to the community at large; but one may go further. Rush Medical College graduates seventy-five or more well-trained doctors each year, and the Presbyterian Hospital graduates, a class of well-trained nurses each year, and let me say that Mr. Day did not say half enough about the character of our training school. It is one of the best in America and there are mighty few that rank with it. The school was fortunate in obtaining the services of a superintendent who has an unusual and wonderful ability as an executive officer. She has made remarkable selection of pupils for her school; and these nurses who have taken the full course prescribed, graduate and leave nothing to be desired as nurses and as women. Applications come from all over the country for our nurses to act as officers of training schools of hospitals. Recently an application came to me to secure one of our graduates for a hospital in San Francisco. Our medical graduates are in demand also as house officers; that is, as internes of hospitals throughout the middle west and elsewhere. Practically every graduate of the medical school has an opportunity to serve as an interne in a hospital and this training subsequent to the full medical course, furnishes young physicians of ability, training and experience of extraordinary value to the immediate community, to the state and to the country. The Presbyterian Hospital, therefore, is not only an educational institution and helpful to those immediately in contact with it, but through physicians and the nurses who go from her doors, the good work for humanity is extended and as broad as the world.

I want to close by saying that the management of this hospital has changed. I do not say this in a spirit of criticism of the older management, for there have been on this board good men always. In many instances the members of the board of managers, or some of them, like the members of other boards of other hospitals and of other institutions, have lent their names willingly and their names have been of value so far as such help goes. But this is only a general help and is not the kind of definite aid and direction which an institution of this kind needs. We can not expect the busy banker or manufacturer to give us his time. With us doctors it is different. It is our business to come and to take care of the poor sick.

Under the old management it is usual for hospitals to have deficits and this one had a deficit of a few thousand dollars every year, and this in spite of the fact that the institution was managed to the best ability of those who were hired to do it. But finally it was given to this hospital to have a man on the board of managers who became interested in the hospital work. At first, I think, his interest was chiefly along financial lines. He saw there was a deficit due to a lack of business methods which permitted leaks and as a member of the board he was determined to stop the leaks. But the investigation of the institution along financial lines led him into the wards and into the rooms and as he has told you today, he noticed an emaciated weak child who later was restored to its mother's arms in full health; he saw a poor adult in the ward sick unto death and when he saw this patient again he was sitting up and soon was able to leave the hospital and go to work. He watched the doctors and the nurses and interested as he was and satisfied usually as he was, he still saw unbusinesslike methods. I do not mean that he criticised the professional methods, but he criticised the waste. He saw a doctor or a nurse use a bigger wad of cotton than was necessary to cleanse a wound, or an unusual and unnecessary amount of dressing material was applied and he criticised it properly. But at any rate, as he went about he became interested in the poor people in the hospital and that made him look at the methods of treatment; and that made him visit the clinics; and that made him inquire what is the clinic for? Why is it necessary to take a patient to the clinic? Does the patient go willingly? Will the exposure hurt him? And then he inquired of patients and he soon learned that the clinics afforded the patients closer attention; that the poor man received as good treatment in his ward as the millionaire could buy in his palatial home; and this education extending over a considerable period of time finally made of this man a physician; not a physician who may write a prescription, but a physician in the sense that he is broad minded and looks upon all the good which a hospital may do not only in the immediate cure of the sick, but in the helpful education it may give to all who come in contact with it. It is to this man that we owe the beautiful pavilion which is dedicated today: Mr. Albert M. Day.

THE PRESIDENT:

For those who desire to see the building, there are nurses on the different floors, who will be most happy to see you, and will explain everything. We will stand to receive the benediction.

Benediction—Rev. Martin B. Hardin.
